

Internship opportunities for web developers - Valencia

Novalins is a global translation services provider for the medical and pharmaceutical industry. We provide linguistic services to a large number of companies in Europe, Asia and America.

Our company is currently looking for young graduates in web development who wish to pursue an internship during several months in Valencia, Spain, within a multicultural and dynamic company. Interns have the possibility to apply for a European grant that covers the stay abroad.

We seek excellent web developers with deep knowledge in programming, who can work independently and show a real spirit of initiative, as well as excellent communication skills. We offer interesting and challenging projects in an exciting working environment that promotes the development of professional and interpersonal skills.

If the adventure of gaining a new and rich professional experience while improving your language skills is appealing to you, please send your application (CV and cover letter) to careers@novalins.com and we will then send you more information about this opportunity!

